Owner: Human Resources | Review date: 1 October 2027

FICTIONAL DEMO ONLY. Original sample rules for RAG testing. Not an actual company policy or legal guidance. Real use requires authorized HR review and applicable requirements.

1. Purpose and scope

This fictional policy sets a transparent review process for full-time demo employees. Reviews discuss work outcomes, role skills and development needs. They support human judgment and employee feedback. They do not authorize AI-based termination, compensation changes or other automatic employment decisions.

2. Review calendar

The review year runs January-December. Set goals in January; hold a mid-year check-in in July and a year-end review in January of the following year. New joiners set initial goals within 30 calendar days. Employees with less than 3 months of service at year-end receive a developmental check-in rather than a full-cycle rating. Managers hold brief progress conversations at least quarterly.

3.1 Goals and evidence

Agree 3-5 role-related goals with outcomes, measures and target dates. Record scope changes when they occur. Use work samples, delivery records, project context and documented stakeholder feedback. Consider constraints and approved leave; do not equate office presence or long working hours with good performance. Employees may correct factual inaccuracies and add evidence.

3.2 Review dimensions

Assess agreed outcomes, quality of work, role-relevant skills and observable collaboration. Use examples for each dimension. Do not infer personality, emotion, honesty or intelligence from interview text, video, attendance or model outputs. Sensitive personal characteristics and medical details are not review criteria. Synthetic attendance or engagement data must not be presented as real evidence.

4. Rating definitions

Use four descriptors: Developing - several agreed role expectations need improvement; Meets - agreed expectations are consistently met; Exceeds - substantial evidence of impact above agreed scope; Outstanding - sustained, exceptional impact with clear evidence across the cycle. A descriptor requires narrative evidence; it is not computed from an attrition probability or a single numeric KPI.

Procedures, safeguards and examples

5. Review procedure

Employees submit a self-review 5 working days before the meeting. Managers prepare evidence and conduct a two-way discussion. A peer feedback summary may be included when job-relevant and sourced. The manager drafts the review within 5 working days of the meeting; the employee may add comments within the next 5 working days. Acknowledgement confirms receipt, not agreement.

6. Calibration and development

HR and department leads review consistency across comparable roles without forced ranking quotas. Record material changes and their evidence. Agree up to 3 development actions, owners and dates, such as training, mentoring or clearer goals. If expectations are not met, discuss support and realistic milestones. This demo document does not define disciplinary or termination procedures.

7. Review requests and access

Employees may ask HR to review a disputed record within 10 working days of receipt. HR acknowledges within 2 working days and aims to respond within 10 working days, notifying the employee if more time is needed. Limit access to the employee, reporting manager and authorized HR or calibration participants. Record who changed the review and why.

8. Links to promotion and workforce insights

A performance review is one input to promotion consideration; no descriptor guarantees promotion. Refer to Promotion Policy, Sections 2 and 3. WorkforceAI may summarize recorded evidence for a reviewer but must label missing data. Attrition predictions are retention signals, not performance ratings. Any development suggestion requires a human discussion and should consider the employee's interests.

9. Worked examples and limitations

Example A: an employee on approved leave has goals adjusted for the available period; approved absence is not a negative performance label. Example B: an Exceeds rating allows evidence to be considered in a promotion packet but does not promise promotion. Example C: overtime alone is insufficient evidence for an Outstanding rating. This pack specifies no salary-increase percentage.
