FICTIONAL DEMO ONLY. Original sample rules for RAG testing. Not an actual company policy or legal guidance. Real use requires authorized HR review and applicable requirements.

1. Purpose and scope

This policy defines fictional leave arrangements for full-time demo employees. The leave year is 1 January to 31 December. Probationary employees may use accrued balances under the same request process. Contractors and interns need a separate written arrangement; this document does not define their entitlement.

2. Leave balances

For a full calendar year, annual leave is 12 working days, casual leave is 6 working days, and sick leave is 10 working days. Annual leave accrues at 1 day per completed month; casual and sick balances are prorated by remaining complete months at joining. Only scheduled working days consume a balance. Company holidays and weekly rest days do not. HR maintains the authoritative balance; a chatbot cannot grant leave.

3. Planned requests and approval

Request annual leave at least 7 calendar days before it starts and casual leave at least 2 working days before it starts. Record dates, leave type, handover and contact for urgent work in the HR portal. The manager reviews coverage within 2 working days; HR confirms the balance. Approval must be recorded before planned leave begins. If approval is pending, contact HR rather than assuming consent.

4.1 Sick-leave notification

For unexpected illness, notify the manager and HR as soon as reasonably possible, preferably before the scheduled shift. A representative may notify them if the employee cannot. The employee may submit the formal request after returning. No diagnosis needs to be shared with the manager.

4.2 Medical evidence

A sick-leave absence lasting more than 3 consecutive working days requires a medical certificate confirming the absence period. Submit it confidentially to HR within 5 working days after returning, or agree an extension with HR. A certificate should not include unnecessary diagnosis details. For 3 or fewer consecutive working days, self-declaration is sufficient unless HR documents a specific reason for further evidence.

Procedures, safeguards and examples

5.1 Leave followed by remote work

Approved sick leave may be followed by a separately approved temporary remote-work arrangement. Leave approval does not approve remote work. Refer to Work From Home Policy, Section 3.1. Remote work is appropriate only when the employee can perform agreed duties; if still unwell, request further leave instead. HR should not require work during approved leave.

5.2 Exhausted balances and other leave

When a balance is exhausted, ask HR to review another applicable balance or a written unpaid-leave arrangement before payroll is processed. No salary deduction is executed by AI. Family-related, parental, bereavement and other statutory or special leave are intentionally not specified in this demo pack; route those questions to HR without inventing an entitlement.

6. Carry-forward and changes

Up to 5 unused annual-leave days may carry into the next year and must be used by 31 March; remaining carried days expire then. Casual and sick balances do not carry forward. This pack does not define cash encashment. To extend or cancel approved leave, submit changed dates and obtain a revised recorded approval. For an emergency extension, notify the manager and HR promptly.

7. Responsibilities and review

Employees submit accurate dates and a practical handover. Managers consider coverage and apply rules consistently. HR verifies balances and stores medical evidence with restricted access. If a request is declined, the manager records an operational reason and considers alternative dates. The employee may request HR review; HR responds within 5 working days. A model score is not a leave-approval criterion.

8. Examples and policy boundaries

Example A: five consecutive working days of medical leave require a certificate under Section 4.2. A following week at home needs separate approval under WFH Section 3.1. Example B: Friday and Monday illness consume two working days if the weekend is a rest period; the request contains two consecutive scheduled working days. A question about maternity leave must be referred to HR because this pack contains no such entitlement.
